At a glance

A Government school of some 400 students in a village in Naubatpur block had no public presence at all. It now has an official website in English and Hindi that publishes notices, results information, admission requirements and statutory disclosures, and that the school office updates itself without a developer.

Written for the people who use it

Parents in Adla read Hindi. Officials and applicants often read English. Every page carries both, switchable from the header, rather than an English site with a token translation.

The school runs it

Notices, staff records and photo albums are added through an admin portal by school staff. No developer is needed to publish a holiday notice, which is the difference between a site that stays current and one that dies in a year.

Statutory by design

UDISE code in the header of every page, and a Mandatory Disclosure page carrying school details, management, land and building, staff counts and facilities in the form an inspection expects.

Built on the school's own accounts

Domain, hosting, database, media storage and codebase all sit under the school's own email address from day one. Nothing is registered to the developer, so nothing has to be transferred, and the school is not dependent on any individual remaining reachable.

Designed for a modest budget

The whole stack runs on free and low-cost service tiers. The only committed cost is the domain at Rs. 2,122.82 for three years. The trade-off is that the back-end sleeps when idle, so the first visit after a quiet spell takes a moment to wake.

How it is built

Six services, each doing one job, all registered to the school. Nothing runs on a machine inside the school building, so there is no server to maintain and no single computer whose failure takes the site down.

LAYER 01 Front end React built with Vite, served by Vercel. Bilingual routing, light and dark modes, responsive to phone.	LAYER 02 API Node.js service on Render. Serves notices, staff, gallery and admin operations.	LAYER 03 Database MongoDB Atlas, cluster with two-factor authentication. All content lives here.	LAYER 04 Media Google Drive, proxied through the API so photographs are served under the school's own domain.	LAYER 05 Domain umvadla.in via Hostinger, registered to the school for three years.	LAYER 06 Code GitHub under the school's own account, so any future developer can pick it up.

Fourteen pages

Grouped by what a visitor comes for. A parent arrives for a notice or an admission requirement; an official arrives for the Mandatory Disclosure; the school office arrives for the Admin Portal.

Authenticated content management for notices, gallery, staff and page content

The landing page carries eleven distinct sections — hero, notice ticker, statistics, motto marquee, about summary, programmes, facilities, Head Master's message, gallery preview, admission status and location.

A briefing, not a menu

The homepage answers what a visitor came for before they click: the latest notices scroll at the top, the school's standing is in the statistics band, and the admission status is stated plainly rather than buried.

The motto as a device

सा विद्या या विमुक्तये runs as a marquee between sections — a piece of the school's identity used structurally, to separate content, rather than as decoration.

Distances, not just an address

The location block gives straight-line distances to the airport, Patna Junction and Gandhi Maidan — the orientation a parent or visiting officer from outside the district actually needs.

About, Leadership & Infrastructure

Three routes under one heading: the school's history, vision and mission; the Head Master's message in full; and the campus and facilities position.

HEAD MASTER'S PORTRAIT

Honest about what is not yet written

The history section says plainly that a fuller account is being compiled by the school and will be published here. A placeholder that tells the truth is better than invented copy, and it gives the school a specific thing to supply.

Three pages, one subject

About, Head Master's Message and Infrastructure are separate routes rather than one long page, so each can be linked to directly — useful when an official asks for the infrastructure position alone.

An overview page and one page per programme, each carrying the BSEB code, medium of instruction and terminal examination.

Codes where they matter

Each programme carries its BSEB school code on the card. Parents filling forms and officials cross-checking records need those numbers, and they are otherwise surprisingly hard to find.

Two routes, not one

Secondary and Senior Secondary have separate pages because they serve different decisions — a Class 8 leaver and a Class 10 passout are not the same visitor.

Breadth beyond the core

The staff list shows Music, Entrepreneurship and Computer Science alongside the sciences and languages — a wider offering than a village Government school is usually assumed to have.

Staff Directory

Eighteen staff members with designation and subject, filterable across seven departments — the page that shows a prospective parent the school is properly staffed.

Initials instead of photographs

Each profile shows a monogram of the member's initials rather than a portrait. It renders consistently, needs no photo session before launch, and avoids collecting staff photographs the school has no consent policy for — a deliberate choice, not a shortcut.

Filtering by department

Seven filters let a parent find the Mathematics teacher without reading eighteen cards. The categories mirror how a school actually organises itself rather than an alphabetical list.

Event albums with a lightbox viewer, backed by Drive storage and served through the school's own domain.

Albums, not a dump

Photographs are grouped by occasion — Pratibha Samman Samaroh, Sakhi Sahayta Desk, Teacher's Day — each with its own count. The school adds a new album per event through the admin portal.

Proxied, not hot-linked

Serving Drive images through the school's own API keeps the storage folder private, keeps URLs on the school's domain, and means the storage provider can be changed later without every image link breaking.

The page that carries a legal duty

This is where the DPDP Act, 2023 bites. Every photograph of a student under 18 needs verifiable parental consent on record before publication. The handover document sets out the school's obligations and a practical way to meet them.

Dated, categorised and individually addressable notices — the operational heart of a school website.

Circular	Unit Test Result Declaration — Open Day	2 Sept 2026	NEW

Each notice has its own address, for example /notices/half-yearly-examination-october-2026 — so a single circular can be shared to a parents' group as a link rather than a photograph of a paper notice.

The page that earns the site its keep

A school website lives or dies on whether notices appear. This one is the first thing on the homepage, has its own filterable page, and is the simplest thing to publish from the admin portal.

Five categories

Circular, Notice, Event, Holiday and Result. The distinction matters to parents scanning for one thing, and the filters make a year's worth of notices navigable.

Every notice is linkable

A dedicated route per notice means a fee deadline can be sent as a link that stays live and authoritative, instead of a forwarded screenshot with no provenance.

Six sections covering process, eligibility by class, the document checklist, fee structure, key dates and an enquiry form.

It answers before the phone rings

The document checklist alone removes the commonest reason a family makes two trips to the school office. For a village school where a visit costs half a day, publishing the list is a practical service, not a marketing page.

Status stated plainly

Admissions being closed is said at the top in a bordered band rather than left for a parent to infer from a date. Where a site has nothing to offer, saying so clearly is the useful answer.

Contact & Mandatory Disclosure

Statutory information in one place

The Mandatory Disclosure page carries school details, management, land and building, staff counts and facilities in the form an inspection or a Right to Information request expects — a page many school sites omit entirely.

Two email addresses, two jobs

A Gmail address for general correspondence and a domain address for public enquiries, with a third reserved for technical and registrar notices. Separating them keeps a renewal warning from being lost among admission questions.

The map link, not an embed

Directions open in the visitor’s own maps application with coordinates rather than loading an embedded map. Faster on a weak connection, and it works on a phone with no data to spare.

Content management — school staff only

What staff can publish themselves

Notices & circulars	Yes
Gallery albums & photographs	Yes
Staff directory entries	Yes

What requires a developer

Page layout & design	No
New pages or features	No
Navigation structure	No
Third-party integrations	No

Two accounts provided

Separate logins for two members of staff, so the school is never dependent on one person being available — and so that when someone leaves, one credential can be retired without locking everyone out.

The difference between a live site and a dead one

Most school websites are abandoned within a year because every change needs the developer. Here the school office publishes a holiday notice in two minutes without asking anyone.

Scoped deliberately

Staff can change content but not structure. That keeps publishing easy while making it very hard to break the site by accident — the right trade for non-technical users.

Two logins, by design

Redundancy at a school with a small office matters more than it does in a company. A single shared password is how institutional access quietly becomes one person's private property.

Design & identity

The site had to work on an office desktop, on an official's laptop and on a parent's phone over a weak connection — and had to read as an institution rather than a template.

THE CREST

A circular seal: the Devanagari motto सा विद्या या विमुक्तये on the upper arc, UMV ADALA on the lower, four dots at the cardinal points, and a tree of knowledge rising from an open book within a radiating burst.

COLOUR	CMYK	SRGB	APPLIED TO
Navy	C96 M85 Y25 K15	#283D74	Ring, lettering, book, motto
Crimson	C21 M99 Y88 K13	#B02230	Rays and book leaves
Teal	C81 M28 Y24 K0	#1C92B0	Tree of knowledge

Typeset in Jaini for the Devanagari and Objektiv Mk2 Extra Bold for the ring lettering, converted to outlines in the deliverable so reproduction never depends on a font licence. CMYK is authoritative — a school prints far more than it publishes.

WHAT IT REPLACED

The notice board

Visible only to those standing in front of it, and only during school hours.

The phone call

Every admission document question answered one family at a time.

The forwarded photograph

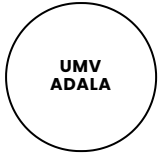

Circulars shared as screenshots with no date, no source and no authority.

No public record at all

A Government school with no way for anyone outside the village to verify it exists.

INTERFACE PRINCIPLES

- Two languages, equally. Every page in English and Hindi from one toggle — not an English site with a translation bolted on.
- Light and dark. A full dark theme alongside the light one shown throughout this document.
- The UDISE code in the header. A school's identity number is its proof of existence; it sits on every page rather than hidden in a footer.
- Numbers before prose. Codes, dates, distances and counts are given as figures, because that is what a visitor came to check.
- Light on the connection. Lazy-loaded images, a linked map rather than an embed, and no heavy libraries — the site is read on rural mobile data.
- Accessible. Skip-to-content, semantic headings, alternative text throughout.
